

Better Silage

There is a vast difference between cut silage and macerated silage. Ordinary cutters chew and beat the silage, throwing only the pulp into the silo and allowing most of the juice to run out at the bottom of the machine.

ROSS

Ensilage cutters cut the silage. Each particle retains its juices. Thus the entire food value goes into the silo. The Ross is the only machine on which the cutting apparatus is equipped with a ball-bearing end thrust and auxiliary knife attachment. This one feature makes the Ross stand head and shoulders above all other silo fillers. It is responsible for the perfect, shear-like cut which nips the silage slick and clean.

Ross machines have adjustable bearings, angle steel frame, four-sided reversible steel cutting bar, angle steel blower and swivel socket for blower pipe.

Ross Ensilage Cutters are made in a full range of sizes, from the small one for a 4-h.p. engine to the big, heavy "Bull Dog." Write today for free booklets.
